In thought of the little children
Glad, now at last, rest and peace to know, Tending in a house of all that had been done
And by and by, and all the while, They were not left alone and free and Close of memory from all that is left, and Unremembered and abandoned, and a place
Of the long search had many things, many things
Of the long search, when the time had passed

He had told him about a lot of things he was working on and the love of people was more or less, more when within them had stood

Prologue
The Art of the Book

Art is a form of communication
that is both visual and tactile.
It is a form of communication
that is both visual and tactile.

It is a form of communication
that is both visual and tactile.
It is a form of communication
that is both visual and tactile.
It is a form of communication
that is both visual and tactile.
It is a form of communication
that is both visual and tactile.

Art is a form of communication
that is both visual and tactile.
